

THE WOMAN'S PLAYBOOK

Entrepreneur, Author & Host
Joanna L. Krotz

Despite industry pledges and more credentialed candidates, STEM fields still show scant interest in hiring women. In fact, it's getting worse. "The number of women in computing went down from 35% in 1990 to a puny 26% in 2015." finds the AAUW. Result: Women aren't waiting to drive. They're steering startups.

Danielle Morrill is cofounder and CEO of Mattermark, a sophisticated curated Big Data service that provides information about startups and private companies for experts and investors – something hard to find and harder to do. Morrill says her service has been called "a Bloomberg terminal for startups."

Elizabeth Holmes dropped out of Stanford at 19 to launch her healthtech startup Theranos in 2003, and now is a billionaire. Her idea: A revolutionary blood test. Theranos (therapy + diagnosis) claims it can run over 70 tests from one drop of blood gained from a single painless pinprick instead of a needle in the arm that extracts multiple vials. "Our mission is to make actionable information accessible to everyone at the time it matters."
